JAN-ERIK SWÄRDH was born in the small town of Enköping, Sweden. As an undergraduate he studied Economics and Statistics at Uppsala University. Since 2004 he has been employed at the Department of Economics in the Swedish National Road and Transport Research Institute (VTI) and affiliated to the PhD Programme in Economics at Örebro University.

This thesis deals with the issue of valuing the non-market good of travel time, with a special focus on commuting time and different types of data used for estimation. Commuting time changes over time are also analyzed.

Doctoral Dissertation

Commuting Time Choice and the Value of Travel Time

JAN-ERIK SWÄRDH
Economics